

G. O. LEADERLESS, MAYEY TARIFF AND IX MEASURES

Jam Legislation Threatens to Passage of Much Talked Of Bills.

(Special from a Staff Correspondent of the Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, June 10.—No new tariff bill for four months, and perhaps longer. No new revenue bill during extra session of Congress now on way.

Such the outlook here while middle Republican leaders try to extricate themselves from a maze of conflicting cross purposes and retrieve the party's promise of conservative legislation.

Three months after the inauguration Congress appears to be headed for one of the worst legislative jams in history. Political bickering and lack of leadership have operated to bring about a situation of confused uncertainty, delaying tariff and revenue legislation and threatening the progress of other measures.

Veterans of House and Senate admitted to-day there is little likelihood that the new Republican tariff can be enacted before October at the earliest, and on the present outlook the new revenue bill will go over until the regular session of Congress in December. It will be begun then and possibly reported to House and started through the legislative mill during the closing of the extra session, but it is believed that there can be no real revision in time to reduce taxes next year.

Despite the ardent efforts of the Administration to speed up tariff and revenue bills, the jealousies and bickerings of Congress are operating to clog the machine and hamper its movements, ponderous and slow at best when these subjects are involved.

Optimistic members of the majority are still predicting the enactment of the permanent tariff and a new Republican revenue measure by October but grizzled survivors of other unfulfilled revenue campaigns find no balm in these predictions. They realize that as things are going, only an explosion or a miracle can complete the Republican programme this year.

In extension of the delay in the tariff bill, it is being recalled that the Underwood tariff act of 1913, which was begun in April, did not finally become a law until October.

Several obstacles stand in plain view as blocking the path of the programme and delaying preparations of the measures. These include:

Division of opinion between the East and West on agricultural tariffs.
A similar division on the tariff schedules affecting industry and manufacturers.

Opposition of many manufacturers to a high protection policy in view of the present world conditions, and the necessity of seeking and holding foreign markets.

Inability to agree on the wool, silk, cotton, lumber and chemical schedules of the new tariff bill.

Uncertainty as to how much revenue will be required from direct taxation in view of the enormous appropriations of Congress and continued expansion of Government activities.

Failure to find a formula for "popular" taxes which people will pay without kicking.

Failure to find a substitute for the excess profits tax that will produce an equal amount of revenue.

Hesitancy to adopt a sales tax, which the ultimate consumer would feel every time he made a purchase.
Unless some sudden and unexpected impetus should be given the tariff measure, it appears improbable that it will make its appearance before August. Then it will be up to the House and Senate to put it through.

ment in the fall.

Somewhere along the line—probably after the tariff bill is reported—the Ways and Means Committee will begin work on the revenue bill. And that, according to present prospects, will prove fully as difficult and beset with as many pitfalls as the permanent tariff.
